The College of Science and Technology is located on Central Michigan University's main campus in Mount Pleasant, Michigan. The university has been known by generations of students as a large university with a smaller college feel and a focus on student engagement and leadership.

With more than 60 locations across the U.S., CMU is nationally recognized for academic excellence in more than 200 programs. Cutting edge research, new facilities, graduate programs, and top faculty ensure an education that is one of the best in the state.

The university's friendly and accessible 480-acre campus blends classic early 20th century architecture with new health professions, library, residence hall, and music facilities. The campus features a park-like environment that takes no more than 15 minutes to walk across.

Visitors are welcome to take a walking tour of the campus or to attend plays, concerts, speeches, athletic events, library and museum exhibits, and much more!
